

Overview:

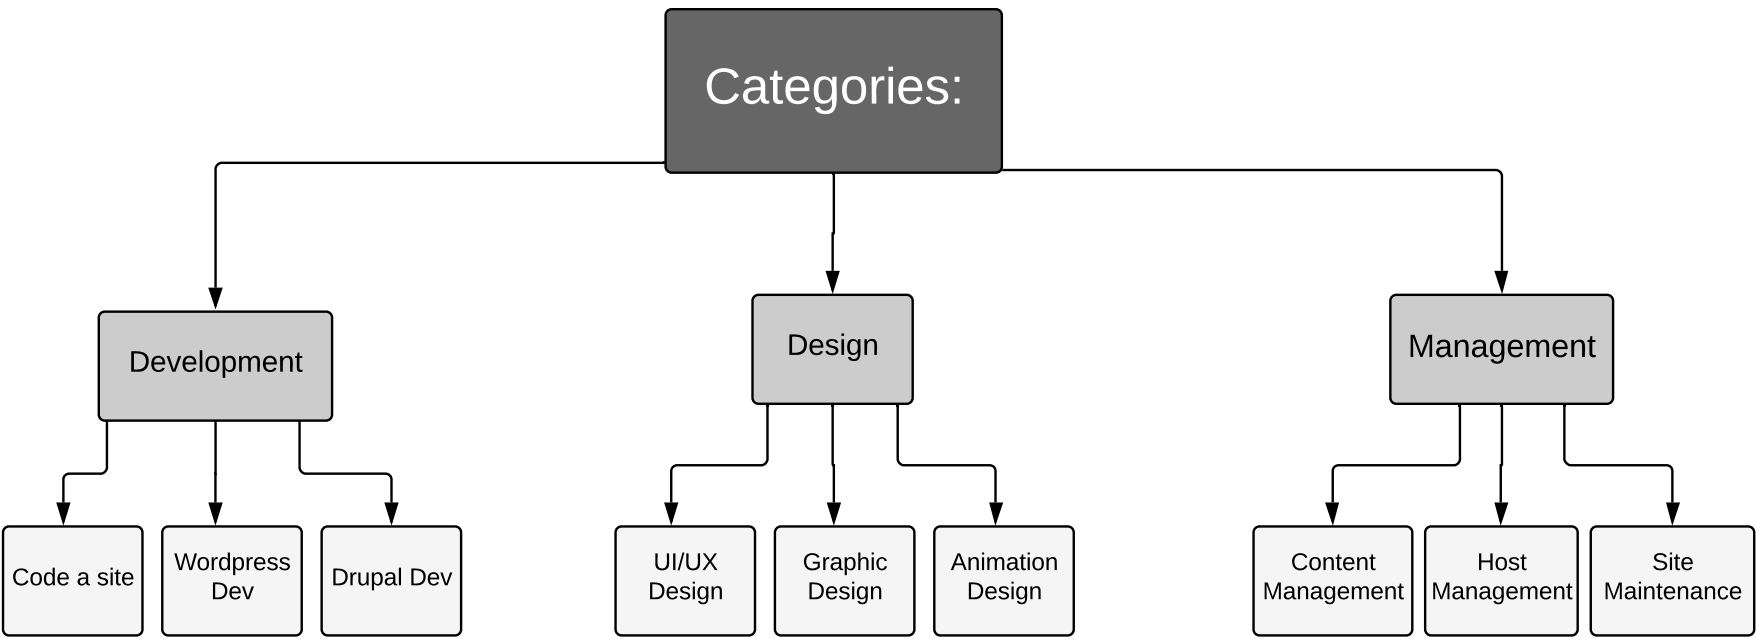

This is a project requestor created for the Akira Web Service - which is probably my future side business!

In this platform, users can request a project by choosing the categories, type, and entering the start & due dates. Users can sort their requested projects by categories, type, start dates, and due dates. Users can edit their requested projects as long as the start date is after today.

Besides, the three graphs under the project inventory will provide users an overview of their requested projects to furthermore help the user to track their inventories.

This is a very meaningful project for me. For a web dev student graduating this quarter, I believe this program will truly help me in my future career.

The Search Structure:

My Target Group

My target group is people who are looking for service in web development, web design, and web management.

I believe this platform will help them to request projects from me easily, and I will try my best to make this site accessible to operate to ensure it is for people with all levels of computer literacy!
